Student Senate meets, approves Lincoln trip

The Student Senate met Thursday Nov. 20 and approved an excursion planned by Senators Mark Norris and Matthew Stelly to meet with student government members in Lincoln to discuss the possible creation of a statewide student organization.

The trip follows a visit by the national chairman of the United States Student Association Doug Tuthill to UNO. Tuthill told several student government members during this visit that Nebraska students must organize on a statewide basis in order to influence legislation affecting students.

The excursion was scheduled for today and tomorrow.

In other senate news, a resolution by Stelly proposing that the Senate issue a formal statement stating the official position of the UNO student government on "important social issues" was referred to the Student Affairs Committee.

Additionally, Chief Administrative Officer Ed Wetherbee said that senior biology student Gerald Cochrane had been appointed to serve on the Publications Board. Cochrane fills the seat vacated by Wetherbee on Oct. 29.

Additionally, Wetherbee said that Gary Kubat had been appointed to the University Committee on Honors and Awards.

The CAO said there are presently 3 seats unfilled on the Campus Security Advisory Committee, 2 seats unfilled on the Traffic Appeals Commission, and 1 seat vacant on the Student Court.

Wetherbee also said that a new student government sponsored duplicating machine had been installed in the College of Business Administration building Room 110, and that it was not operational.

Commission fines Langford for three campaign violations

By MARK DIRKSCHNEIDER
Gateway Editor

The UNO Election Commission ruled Nov. 25 that student body president/regent candidate Florene Langford was guilty of three violations of university campaign regulations.

The decision, which results from two petitions filed Nov. 14 by Langford's opponent Mark Pfeffer, also said that a ruling would not be made on three other charges because the commission considered the issues beyond their jurisdiction.

The commission declined to disqualify Langford as a student/regent candidate, though, as Pfeffer had requested. But levied three fines totaling $55 on the candidate.

Langford characterized the commission's rulings as "disappointing. I don't know what they based their rulings on," she said.

Pfeffer said he had "no comment" regarding the decision.

The commission ruled that Langford had violated statutes pertaining to the printing of false material, the number of campaign posters displayed, and that a Langford campaign worker had made a derogatory and unproven statement regarding Pfeffer to a UNO student.

According to the commission, Langford was guilty of displaying more than the permitted two campaign posters per hallway in university buildings. The commission fined Langford $25 for the violation.

Langford had said earlier that campaign regulations regarding what actually constituted a poster were vague, and that, in her opinion, some of her campaign flyers had erroneously been called posters.

The commission also ruled that a campaign worker for Langford had told a UNO student that "the opponent of candidate Langford" had slashed the tires of Langford's car.

The commission added, though, that the incident was "beyond the power of Ms. Langford to prevent." Consequently, the commission prescribed a "light" $10 fine for the violation.

Langford said prior to the hearings that she had no knowledge of such an incident occurring, and later said that the commission had failed to prove that the statement was actually made by a Langford campaign worker.

A $20 fine was levied as a result of the commission's decision that a Langford campaign letter which referred to Pfeffer's campaign as a "smear campaign" constituted a false statement.

At the same time, the commission decided that Pfeffer's charge that Langford's campaign had provided food not prepared by the UNO food service to the public during a campus campaign rally, thereby violating a statute of the Managerial Professional and Office Service Staff Handbook, was beyond their jurisdiction.

The commission also ruled beyond their jurisdiction charges filed by Pfeffer that Langford had issued a flyer containing a false statement, and that she had used state funds to promote her candidacy.

The commission ruled that a Langford campaign flyer alleging "definite tampering" with the results of last year's student regent election in which she was also a candidate, pertained to the general election rather than the runoff vote. Therefore, according to the commission, Pfeffer's complaint was filed too late to be ruled upon. They added though, that Langford's statement alleging tampering in last year's election was in "serious error."

Regarding Pfeffer's charge that an agent of Langford campaigned within the voting area during the runoff vote, the commission said the allegation "has not been proven to our satisfaction."

Langford said she definitely plans to appeal the ruling to the UNO Student Court.

Election Commissioner Susan Seidler said the candidates have until noon today to file an appeal. After that time, the candidates may still appeal the ruling, but the counting of the ballots will have already begun.

Langford said she hadn't decided yet whether she would appeal the case before the Wednesday deadline.

"I would like to see the ballots counted," she said.

Pfeffer said he had not decided whether he would appeal the commission's rulings.

Memorial held for student

By MATTHEW C. STELLY

A memorial was held in the Gallery Room in the Milo Bail Student Center on Nov. 25 for UNO student James Powell. The 19-year-old Powell was shot early Saturday morning by State patrolman James Burns after a high speed chase.

Curtis Sallee, Learning Resource Center supervisor, organized the memorial with the Reverend James C. Wade of Salem Baptist Church serving as moderator.

Nebraska State Sen. Ernest Chambers was the first person to speak. Chambers discussed the "senselessness" of James' death and how the death related to the question of high-speed chases in general. The senator also added that Burns has been cleared of any wrong-doing, but "that's what happens when Frank James is asked to investigate Jesse James."

"Tears won't bring Brother Powell back," Chambers said, "but those of us who are still alive should not be afraid to confront those persons who would take the life of a young person in this manner."

change conditions

Chambers also told the standing room only crowd that while grieving might be important, the key was to change the conditions that created the grievance in the first place. "I don't like gatherings like this," Chambers said amidst sporadic sobbing, from some of the people in attendance, "but they'll continue unless we begin to stand up for what is right."

Another speaker, Arnold Traynham who serves as Community Organizer for the Urban League of Nebraska, said he was in attendance as a private citizen.

"However," he added during his brief presentation, "I agree that something has got to be done, and I will gladly work with persons here at UNO to do whatever is needed to right such wrongs."

The Rev. Wilkinson Harper of the Metropolitan Missionary Baptist Church cited examples of "how little members of the city administration understand the needs of black people." He added that Omaha is in a very "sensitive situation" and that members of the black community are "appalled" at how city officials refuse to listen.

Other speakers included the Rev. Abe Brown, also of Salem and the Rev. Luke Nichols, President of the Inter-denominational Ministerial

Writer's Workshop magazine brings sci-fi to campus

By MATT SMOLSKY

Gateway Staffwriter

A slipped disk and some valuable lessons. Those are a few things Dean Sciford says he got out of editing Orion, a science fiction magazine.

The magazine premiered this semester. A quarterly publication by UNO's Science Fiction Writers Workshop, the next issue should be out in mid to late February, Sciford said.

The slipped disk, Sciford said, came from bending over tables during a marathon layout session.

"We did everything in the last week." A single session went from noon one Saturday to 12:30 a.m. Sunday morning, he said.

The valuable lessons, he said, came from trying to put the magazine together in such a short period of time. "I know what publishers go through with the stories we (writers) send in."

Writers for the magazine, he added, came from within UNO's Science Fiction club, of which Sciford is the president.

This, he said is a not so obvious shortcoming. "There are a lot of people on campus who can write and write well." Sciford said no stories were rejected for this issue because just enough material was received.

Recruiting writers, he said, is done by "telling everybody we know who can write." Those wishing to submit articles for the next issue should contact the Writers Workshop for deadline information, said Sciford.

One of the positive aspects of the magazine is its UNO origins. Sciford said he didn't know of any publication of this kind coming out of any other campus in the nation.

He said he hoped one of the results of the magazine would be more interest in Writers Workshop. Although done as an extension of the club, the next issue will be done as part of a course titled, "Literary Magazine," Sciford said. He added anyone holding a position of responsibility will have to take the course.

The next edition will see minor changes in the staff, he said. One new addition, will be a "cosmic strip" which he described as a science fiction comic strip.

Many people, said Sciford, think of science fiction as "kids stuff." Orion, he said, is instead an outgrowth of a science fiction course taught by Max Levy last semester. Levy is faculty advisor for Orion, and, says Sciford, helped a great deal with the magazine.

The course, taught out of the College of Continuing Studies at the time, was "aimed specifically at marketing our stories."

When the spring semester ended the course moved to Writers Workshop, he said. At about the same time, he added, the science-fiction club was born.

The title was the result of compromise, said Sciford. "I wanted to call it 'Science Fiction'."

Orion is an appropriate title, however, as Sciford says "the Orion nebula has a lot of new stars born in it every day."

Sciford said the publication has already broke even financially. He said he doesn't know how

The Gallery Room was filled to capacity to the point that some 40 to 50 people waited outside in the hallways. A petition was circulated which called for Nov. 25 to be designated as "James Powell Recognition Day." Some 117 signatures were recorded and the petition was submitted that same day to Vice-Chancellor Richard Hoover's office.

petition organized

The petition, put together by Student Senators Miguel Hernandez and Matthew Stelly, reads in part, as follows:

"On Sunday morning at 2:00 a.m., our fellow student, James Powell, was shot by a state patrolman. Even though the shooting has been declared 'accidental,' we still cannot just dismiss James' death in such a cursory manner.

"Because of what he meant to us — and still means to us here at UNO, we are requesting that Nov. 25 be declared a day in memorial for James Powell. More definitively, we hope to declare this day, 'James Powell Recognition Day.'

"We realize that your office does not have the power to pardon students from school for such an endeavor. But we want to put the administration on notice that this day will be observed, from this day forth on the date mentioned above."

The services concluded with a wreath of flowers being presented to members of the Powell family by Sallee in the name of the UNO NAACP. Sallee serves as advisor for that organization.

Students honored

The Institute of Business Designers and the American Society of Interior Designers recently presented 21 University of Nebraska students with an award for the outstanding student display among area colleges at the annual IBD/ASID Source/Resource Exposition 1980 held at Omaha's Western Heritage Museum.

Marion Johnson, instructor of textiles, clothing and design within the College of Home Economics, accepted the award on behalf of the students from IBD representative Nancy Breslow and ASID representative Lorraine Baker.

The display, composed by interior design students from the University of Nebraska at Omaha and University of Nebraska-Lincoln campuses, included basic design work, residential floor plans, design work for businesses and related drawings. Participating students also presented a slide show, "Interior Design Option in the College of Home Economics," as part of their display.

UNO students who worked on the display include Pam Mactier, Jan McClymond, Eula McKell, Donna Peterson, Ed Svajgl, Lonnie Klenk, Kathy Heires, Jeanette Fletcher, Jean Sayles, Sue Goesser, Peg Cunningham, Mary Jo Malone, Beth Putnam, Jane Long and Nancy Cuva.

AAUP head says picket 'symbolic'

By MARK DIRKSCHNEIDER
Gateway Editor

Picketing performed by UNO faculty members Tuesday Nov. 25 was done in an attempt to convey a sense of impatience to the Board of Regents, according to the UNO chapter of the American Association of University Professors chairman Dr. Bernard Kolasa.

"We wanted to alert the Regents to the fact that there is a growing sense of frustration over the lack of progress in the negotiations," Kolasa said.

The faculty union and the Regents negotiating team have been negotiating for nearly eight months over a variety of salary and non-salary issues. At this time, UNO faculty members are working without a contract.

Kolasa said that about 20 faculty members participated in the picketing.

"We purposefully kept the number of people participating low, because we intended for the picketing to be a symbolic protest," the associate professor said. He added that "at this time" there were no plans for any further pickets.

The Regents and the UNO AAUP have been divided on issues such as the amount faculty members should be given in salary increases, and governance issues such as the selection of curriculum and the granting of tenure.

Kolasa said the faculty negotiators had an "informal deadline" of the middle of December for "significant progress to be reached." The AAUP chairman said that if significant progress was not reached by that time the union would "re-examine options it might take in the future."

Barring a break in the stalemate, Kolasa said the AAUP would begin serious consideration of referring the negotiations to the Nebraska Industrial Relations Board for arbitration.

The AAUP plans to submit a revised proposal to the Regents' team sometime in the next three weeks, Kolasa said, adding that he hoped progress would result.

Bruce Wright, head of the Regents negotiating team said only that the picketing was "unfortunate."

"The issues can best be settled at the negotiating table," he said.

and maybe a file at CIA headquarters? New York conference brings discussion with execs, Henry K

By CORNELIUS GAINES
Gateway Columnist

The following is the first in a two-part series regarding Mr. Gaines' trip to the "Business Tomorrow IV" conference in New York. The second part will be published in the Dec. 5 issue of the Gateway.

On November 23-25, I had the privilege of representing UNO in a national conference. The conference was titled, "Business Tomorrow VI," and it was organized by a group of Princeton students and sponsored by businesses such as the Alcoa Foundation, Ashland Oil, Bendix Corporation, Boeing Company, the Columbia Broadcasting System, Exxon Corporation, Mobil Oil and Monsanto Company, just to name a few.

Each year the Princeton group searches for undergraduate students to balance their conference. Members from the business community as well as representatives of government are invited to participate in this affair. This year, Princeton mailed 1,400 applications to universities and colleges throughout the country, and from that 1,400, they selected 200 students.

For those of you who may be interested in how well Nebraska was represented at this conference, you may feel proud in hearing that there were four students from this state. This is excellent, considering the fact that states like New York, California and Illinois have, supposedly, schools with higher academic standards than Nebraska and its neighbor states.

Mogens Kold Knudsen from Dana College, Steve Luby from Creighton University and James R. Rogers from UNL were the other representatives from Nebraska.

first night

The first night of the conference, the participants gathered in the Georgian Ballroom of the Sheraton Center Hotel in New York for the opening reception. It was interesting to see the students who had big plans for this event. I was sitting at a table with executives from Mobil Oil, Exxon and Dow Chemical. There were two empty seats at our table. We were discussing the Middle East situation when all of a sudden three students swooped down on our table like hungry vultures. The next thing I knew we were discussing the job recruiting programs of the three business giants. At that point I headed for the bar for another drink.

Dinner followed the reception, and after dinner we were served Henry Kissinger for dessert. He began his keynote address on a comical note. He made statements such as, "I like Ron more than he likes me" and "Reagan won the election because I supported someone else in the primaries. . . that's how it always is." He received big chuckles from the largely aristocratic audience.

When he began to get serious, he went back to his days in the Nixon administration. He said that now the country finds itself in a hopeful position. This was reflected in the recent election. He called Vietnam an intellectual tragedy and blamed it for unleashing a decade of domestic crisis.

According to Kissinger, Vietnam was also a main factor in positioning the United States in an apologetic posture. "I supported Reagan in the general election because the trend of the last fifteen years had to be reversed." He said the period of U.S. self destruction is now at an end. "We are willing to look at question similar to the one I had in mind which was in reference to South Africa.

At this point Kissinger informed the audience that he was 15 minutes late for his next appointment. However, the issue of South Africa was too hot for him to walk out on. He gave a brief and vague answer to the question. He said it was in the interests of both the black and white races not to go to war.

Another black student who was in line fired another South African question at Kissinger. Before Kissinger would answer the question he made it known that he had to leave after the answer. I then turned around disappointed and walked back to my table. The question posed was, "Why wouldn't it be in the interest of blacks to go to war?"

ducked question

The tension in the room had risen, and Kissinger again found a way to duck the question. He said the white minority government must play a major role in government because majority rule isn't the answer to the country's problems. Then, without wasting one second the audience rose to give him a standing ovation, and he left the podium. I was waiting at the back exit, figuring he would use it for security reasons.

Sure enough I figured correctly. When he was within ten feet of me, I made a sudden motion toward him which alarmed his security guards. Fortunately for me I had a pen and my note pad which I handed to him for his autograph. His security guards surrounded us as he signed my pad. I also handed him my address and asked him to send me a transcript of his speech. But he'll probably turn my name in to the CIA.

problems without apologizing for our actions."

long speech

At this point he had been speaking for more than an hour and the question and answer session was about to begin. I tried to position myself as close to the microphone as possible, but I still ended up being about tenth in line. It was unlikely that I would get to ask a question because there was another microphone on the other side of the ballroom, and we took turns asking questions. Although I didn't get to the microphone, another student asked him a

I puffed nervously on a cigarette as the priest smiled and replied, "There, there, my son. Prayer and perserverance will guide you. Be patient and accept the humility of knowing God's grace is with thee. Tell me your story."

UNO GATEWAY

"It started innocently, enough, Father. It was the fall of 1972, the autumn of the Nixon landslide when I took my first drink. It was hot, slimy, greasy and grimy behind that grill, in the foulest of fast food restaurants, the Red Barn. The grease slithered slowly down my nose into the corner of my mouth but I didn't care. The drink relaxed me and helped me get through the long, dirty hours in that dump. So I started sneaking drinks between the deep-frier

"I was caught on a Sunday afternoon by my boss. He said, 'Blotto! So it's true. You've been drinking on the job. We don't pay you $1.40 an hour to screw off, you know. What do you have to say for yourself?' I tried to act very nonchalant and said, 'Uh, my cheesebusters are especially good today, sir.' With a scowl on his face, he replied, 'Don't get funny, Blotto. No one who works here would eat that crap. I'm afraid I'm going to have to fire you.' At that, I said, 'Piss off.'"

"I took satisfaction in that last remark, Father, but he was right. I had a problem. I didn't know what to do about it. I was afraid of becoming an outcast. Would I be kicked off the whiffle ball team? Would my high school find out? I felt remorseful too — I was going to miss Marie and the way she wiggled when she made french fries.

"I decided to moderate my drinking. I had only one drink a day for five years, supplemented with lots of chocolate milk. Hah! I was proof that a problem drinker like myself could learn to drink responsibly. Life seemed sunnier and full of hope.

"Unfortunately, I started to suffer withdrawal symptoms in 1977. Like a newly pubescent lad who wakes up every morning with an uh... yes well I started waking up with the shakes instead. I became nervous, edgy, and started smoking more heavily. Slowly I was sucked in once again by the demon, the sultry temptress. The serpent said to me, 'Come on. Don't be a square. It won't give you pimples or rot your stomach. Besides, we both know you can stop at one drink. You're not insatiable. Everybody needs it once in awhile. Heeheeohohohaha!'

"The serpent was sexy, Father, and I let the hedonistic side of me take over. I started having a couple of drinks in the afternoon, then three or four, and then... well, it's an old story, isn't it?"

"Unlike some who become loud and abrasive, I became funny-looking, energetic, and developed a fetish for pizza. I would smother the tomato sauce with kisses, gently caress the mozzarella cheese, savor every morsel of hamburger. People started staring at me in pizza parlors which, naturally, made me crave another drink."

"By 1979, I was up to seven or eight cans a day and back to my old tricks at work — drinking when I was supposed to be book-keeping. I started making errors. Was it $1,000 or $1,000,000? I didn't care. All I wanted was a drink, and if I could manage it, pizza for lunch. I daydreamed of Marie and her french fries and of the curly-haired girl who made me discover my hormones in the eighth grade. The pleasures of the flesh began to dominate. I was so close to the gutter I could smell the refuse.

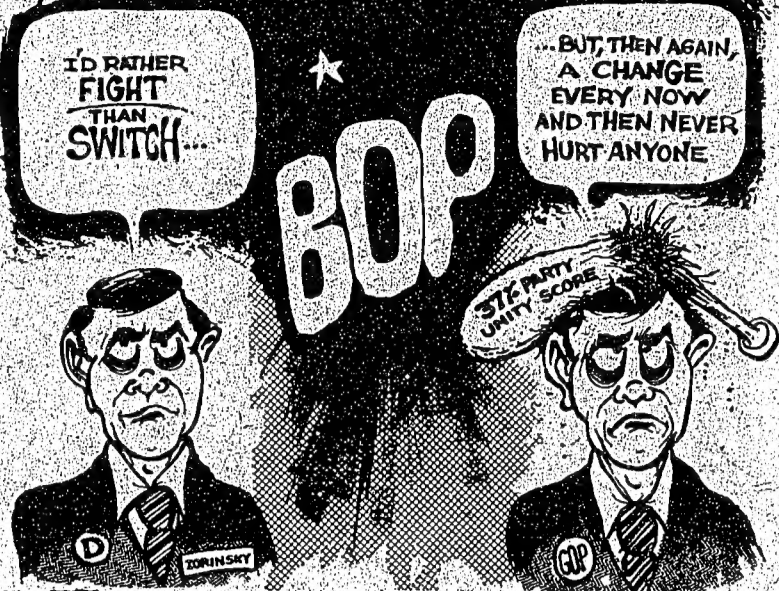

"But it was an incident a couple of weeks ago that has brought me to you, Father. I was really on a binge — 12 or 13 cans by six o'clock in the evening. I made a suggestive remark to a girl scout, told an old lady to walk in front of a bus, and then I started to hallucinate. I imagined that Ronald Reagan was president of the United States, that Strom Thurmond was trying to repeal the Voting Rights Act in the Senate Judiciary Committee, that the Osmonds would be regular performers at the White House. When I finally came down the next morning I realized that I hadn't been dreaming, that Reagan was really in, that it was all true, and that God had allowed it to happen because of my immoral behavior during the last seven years. I cried for a long time Father, and here I am."

The priest smiled and said, "My son, God is not a vengeful being, at least not with those who repent. You have taken an important step toward rejoining the family of Christ. You must do one more thing: Declare publicly that you are a sinner."

We went into the old hall and saw all kinds of people — housewives, businessmen, derelicts, students, and many others. I sweated as Father introduced me. I rose to speak:

"Friends, you know why I am here. I too was once a slave to the deadly mixture of carbonated water, sugar, caramel color, phosphoric acid, natural flavorings, and caffeine. I am here to renounce the life I've led for the last several years. I am a cokeoholic."

Lady Mav Cagers garner first tourney crown

The UNO women's basketball team won the first of what Head Coach Cherri Mankenberg hopes will be many tournament championships this season by defeating the University of Missouri-St. Louis 70-50 Sunday night in the finals of the Thanksgiving Holiday Tournament in St. Louis.

Senior Barb Hart scored 24 points and pulled down 11 rebounds to lead the Lady Mavs while Norene Groff-Conway added 14 points and center Mary Henke 17 points and 11 rebounds en route to the championship.

UNO opened the tournament by defeating Lewis (Ill.) University 74-59 Friday afternoon.

Hart scored 25 points and grabbed 10 rebounds in that contest and Conway added 19 points, 13 coming in the first half, to lead the Lady Mavs.

UNO, which trailed 35-32 at halftime, went to the full-court press in the second half and came up with 10 turnovers, seven by Renita Samuel, as they held Lewis to just 9 of 32 from the field and 24 second-half points to gain the win.

In the semifinals against Eastern Illinois Saturday Hart was at it again, scoring 20 points, along with Conway and Henke as the trio accounted for all but 11 of the Lady Mavs points in their 71-58 victory.

Henke also grabbed 10 rebounds to lead UNO in that category, while Hart added eight boards and Conway six as the Lady Mavs headed into Sunday's showdown with Missouri-St. Louis for the tournament championship.

In that championship game, the Lady

Mavs jumped out to a 14 point, 36-22 halftime lead, and never trailed as they won their first tournament championship of the season.

The outstanding performances by Hart and Conway in the tourney earned the UNO pair a place on the all-tournament team.

Hart finished the tourney with 69 points in the three games while Conway had 53 points during the tournament.

The Lady Mavs next game will be against William Penn, which was ranked third in the nation in the Division II pre-season poll, Friday beginning at 5:45 in the UNO Fieldhouse.

The game, which precedes the men's game against Dana College, will be broadcast on KVNO-FM radio, 90.7 on the dial.

Intramural wrestling season to begin

Intramural Grapplers will take their best shots at each other today, as the annual Intramural Wrestling tournament will take place.

The annual event, often ruled by fraternity powerhouses, is open to all current UNO students, faculty or staff members. It will give non-varsity wrestlers a chance to compete against opponents of similar weights and abilities.

Weigh-ins for the tournament will take place from 10:00 am-12:00 noon and from 2:00 pm-4:00 pm in the HPER locker rooms (adjacent to sauna rooms). The tournament will begin at 5:30 pm in the Fieldhouse.

Weight classes for the tournament will be: 118 lbs., 126, 134, 142, 150, 158, 167, 177, 190, and Heavyweight. For more information on the tournament, contact Campus Recreation (HPER Room 100) at 554-2539.

Attention Hotshots! Campus Recreation is sponsoring a free throw contest, December 9th for 11:00 am-1:00 pm in the Fieldhouse. The contest is open to all UNO student, faculty, and staff members. Contact Campus Recreation (HPER Room 100) at 554-2539 for more information.

Join the Holiday Madness — a Children's Excursion to be held Saturday, December 6th from 10:00 am to 12:00 noon in the HPER Building. The excursion is open to children ages 4-12 of UNO Students, Faculty and staff members. For more information contact Campus Recreation (HPER Room 100) at 554-2539.

The next Women's night activity is Splashnastics, to be held December 10th from 7:00 pm to 9:30 pm in the HPER Building. This event is open to all UNO women student, faculty and staff members. Don't forget your swimsuits for this event! For more information, contact Campus Recreation at 554-2539.

Shooting for Two... against Westmar is southpaw Rick Keel.

UNO off to 2-0 start

Balance keys cage wins

The UNO basketball squad jumped off to a 2-0 start over the holiday break with convincing wins over two smaller midwest schools.

The Mavericks opened up the season Nov. 21 with a 98-76 win over Southwest Minnesota. Eight nights later UNO broke the century mark as it thrashed Westmar (LeMars, Iowa) 107-69.

Before the season began, head coach Bob Hanson said the team's "ability to play together" would be the key to a successful season, especially in light of the fact that five key veterans graduated from last year's squad.

The balance Hanson was hoping for surfaced in the first two games as five Mavericks scored in double figures against Southwest Minnesota and six hit for double digits in the second win against Westmar.

Junior guard Rick Keel led Maverick scorers in the first contest with 20 points. Keel, a transfer from Kirkwood C.C. (Iowa), hit 10 or 15 field goal attempts in the opener and dished out four assists as the Mavericks took a 13-point lead into the locker room at the half and came out smoking to push the final margin to 22 points.

Senior Jim Gregory pitched in 14 points against Southwest Minnesota while another junior college transfer, Tony Cunningham, added 11.

Freshman Dean "The Dream" Thompson pitched in 10 points, handed out four assists and snared three rebounds. Senior Bill DeLano hit five of seven attempts and also totaled 10 points in the opener. Cunningham and Gregory were the leading Maverick rebounders with nine and seven, respectively.

The big win over Westmar started off a bit on the rocky side for UNO, which led by only three at the intermission.

But balance and youth pulled UNO together in time to post a decisive win.

The Mavericks, who outscored Westmar 63-28 in the last half went to their bench and got 66 points from reserves Gregory, Thompson, DeLano, Jeff Valentine and Dave Felici.

Gregory tied with Westmar's Bill Marshall for game scoring honors with 19 points. Gregory hit eight of 12 from the floor and also received high praise from Hanson for his defensive work.

Cunningham added 15 points and seven rebounds while Thompson hit seventy percent from the field on a 15-point night. DeLano hit five of seven shots from the field for the second straight game time and sunk all four free throws of his for a 14-point performance.

Keel and Valentine added 12 and 10 points respectively and Felici popped in eight points.

DeLano was the leading rebounder for UNO, pulling down 11 missed shots.

The Mavericks shot 50 percent or better in each contest and sank 29 of 43 free throws (67 percent) in the two games.

The Mavericks hit 46 of 92 field goal attempts against Southwest Minnesota and 42 of 79 against Westmar. UNO also outrebounded each of its foes badly, snaring 44 missed shots to Southwest Minnesota's 31 and added 63 against Westmar, which had only 30 retrieves.

UNO met Creighton last night in the annual intracity shootout at the Civic Auditorium. Coverage of that contest will be carried in Friday's Gateway.

UNO's wrestling team won the UNO Invitational Wrestling Tournament for the first time since 1969 on Nov. 22, dethroning two-time defending champion Augustana.

Mike Denney's squad had the tournament won even before the finals round began and outscored second place Augustana 105-81.5.

Eight of the UNO wrestlers on the Maverick "A" squad made it to the finals and five won in the championship round.

Dave Clark (126), Roger Hefflinger (134), Ted Husar (150), Bill Wofford (158) and Greg Wilcox (190) all took home first place honors for UNO.

Two of the 12 teams entered in the invitational wore UNO uniforms. The UNO "B" squad placed eighth with 24.25 points.

"We were really pleased with the results," said Denney, who is in his second year as the mat coach at UNO. "As a team, we wrestled very well."

Clark won the 126-pound final by defeating teammate Dave Walton 7-5. Walton made it to the finals wrestling for the Maverick "B" squad.

Hefflinger, a sophomore, outpointed Kurt Clevenger of Northeast Missouri 8-4 in the finals. The Yakima, Wash. native was named the McDonald's Wrestler of the Week for his efforts in the tournament.

In the 142-pound final, Jim Sackett of UNO was defeated 3-2 by Mark Bower of Augustana. Sackett, Phil Pisasale and Ted Reehl were the three Mavericks on the "A" squad to lose finals matches.

Pisasale lost a 7-3 decision to John Shearer of UNL in the 118-pound match while heavyweight Reehl lost a 6-4 overtime decision to Tom Hanson of Minnesota-Morris.

Husar won a 9-7 decision over Dennis Staks of St. Cloud State in the 150-pound finals.

Wofford, decisioned Collyn

Florendo of Augustana 8-5 in the 158-pound finals and Greg Wilcox won the 190-pound finals with a 6-2 overtime performance.

Wilcox was named "Hustler of the Week" by Denney.

"We thought we had a chance to win the tournament, but we didn't think we'd dominate it that way," said Denney. "The kids all worked hard though, and they really wanted to win."

Denney said it was "a really good win because it was over such a good field.

"But we can't forget that the season's really just beginning. There's a long way to go," he added.

Deadlines Ahead

Regardless of whether you are graduating or trying to finish several projects for classes this semester, there are other deadlines you need to be aware of. The Campus Security Department's deadline for submitting the list of students with unpaid parking violations to the Registrar's Office is December 3, 1980.

If you pay your fines anytime between December 3, 1980 and December 10, 1980, we can still make adjustments on our records and not have to go through Stop Enrollment at Registration.

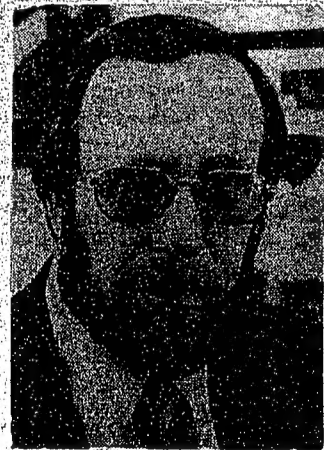

No Buses During Finals Week

The Aksarben Shuttlebus Program will not operate during finals week, Dec. 15-19, 1980. Faculty/Staff and Students may park in Student lots on campus during this week without a parking permit. The Shuttlebus program will resume operation on January 12, 1980.

GTA Spaces

It won't be long. The University Planning Committee has approved Campus Security's recommendation to re-locate GTA parking to the east side of 62nd Street. Upon arrival by Chancellor Weber, the signs will be installed. There will be a one-week adjustment period to notify unauthorized permit holders parking in the new area after the signs are installed.

Your patience and understanding is hereby solicited for another couple weeks until everything is finalized. Thank you.
